ORDER

Eric Conner, a Wisconsin prisoner proceeding in forma pauperis, sued several correctional officers and nurses for failing to promptly treat his severe back pain. See 42 U.S.C. § 1983. At screening, see 28 U.S.C. § 1915A, the district court concluded that his allegations did not state a claim under the Eighth Amendment and dismissed the complaint; the court assessed a “strike” under 28 U.S.C. § 1915(g). of appeal, and the district court authorized him to proceed in forma pauperis. But the court did not know—because Conner did not disclose—that he had recently incurred three strikes in other lawsuits, and in each was told by the court that he had incurred strikes. See Conner v. Waterman, 794 F. App'x 527, 529 (7th Cir. 2020) (one strike for frivolous suit and one for frivolous appeal); Conner v. Schwenn, No. 19-cv-921-bbc, 2020 WL 869220, at *8 (W.D. Wis. Feb. 21, 2020) (one strike for failure to state a claim), aff'd, 821 F. App'x 633 (7th Cir. 2020).

Because Conner had accrued at least three strikes before filing this appeal, the Prison Litigation Reform Act bars him from proceeding without prepayment of fees unless he is in “imminent danger of serious physical injury.” See § 1915(g). His allegations, however, do not suggest that he faced any such danger (indeed, he acknowledged that he was seen and treated within two days of his complaints of pain). “A litigant who knows that he has accumulated three or more frivolous suits or appeals must alert the court to that fact.” Ammons v. Gerlinger, 547 F.3d 724, 725 (7th Cir. 2008). Conner failed to do so. This appeal is dismissed as a sanction for his misconduct, and he remains responsible for all fees due, both to this court and the district court. See id.; Isby v. Brown, 856 F.3d 508, 521 (7th Cir. 2017). Per Newlin v. Helman, 123 F.3d 429, 436–37 (7th Cir.1997), Conner is barred from filing any civil suits in this circuit until he has paid all the fees he owes, from all of his suits, unless he meets the imminent-danger standard of § 1915(g).
